Unveiling the Intersections of Gender, Race, and Class

Drawing upon a rich tapestry of research and theory, this groundbreaking book examines the complex intersections of gender, race, and class in educational settings. It sheds light on how these power dynamics influence student outcomes, teacher practices, and the overall school climate.

Through insightful case studies and thought-provoking discussions, the authors uncover the subtle and overt ways in which power and oppression are perpetuated in the classroom. They argue that traditional educational approaches often reinforce existing inequalities, perpetuating cycles of marginalization and exclusion.
