Suicide is the second leading cause of death for young people in the United States. Each year, thousands of young people take their own lives, and many more attempt suicide. Suicide is a preventable tragedy, but it can be difficult to talk about and even harder to know how to help someone who is struggling.

Marooned Suicide Prevention Play is an engaging and powerful play that addresses the serious issue of suicide among young people. This play is a valuable resource for schools and communities looking to raise awareness about suicide prevention and provide support to those who are struggling.

The play tells the story of a group of teenagers who are stranded on a deserted island after their plane crashes. As they struggle to survive, they must also deal with the emotional and psychological challenges of being stranded, including thoughts of suicide. The play explores the complex factors that can lead to suicide, such as depression, anxiety, and bullying. It also shows the importance of reaching out for help and the power of hope.

Marooned Suicide Prevention Play is a well-written and moving play that is sure to leave a lasting impression on audiences. The play is appropriate for audiences of all ages, and it is a valuable resource for schools and communities looking to address the issue of suicide prevention.
