About the Book

New Directions in Indigenous Studies: Charting a Course for the Future explores the latest trends and developments in the field of Indigenous Studies. This comprehensive volume brings together leading scholars, researchers, and activists to provide a cutting-edge analysis of the most pressing issues facing Indigenous peoples today.

The book is divided into four parts:

1. Decolonization and Reconciliation
2. Cultural Revitalization
3. Indigenous Education
4. Indigenous Research

Each part features a series of essays that explore the key issues and challenges in each area. The essays are written by a diverse range of authors, including Indigenous scholars, non-Indigenous allies, and community activists. They offer a variety of perspectives on the most important issues facing Indigenous peoples today.

Praise for New Directions in Indigenous Studies

"This book is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the current state of Indigenous Studies and the challenges and opportunities facing Indigenous peoples today. The essays are insightful, thought-provoking, and inspiring. They offer a roadmap for the future of Indigenous Studies and the work that needs to be done to create a more just and equitable world for Indigenous peoples."

— Dr. Winona LaDuke (Anishinaabe)

"This book is a valuable resource for scholars, students, and activists working in the field of Indigenous Studies. It provides a comprehensive overview of the latest trends and developments in the field, and it offers a variety of perspectives on the most important issues facing Indigenous peoples today. The essays are well-written and accessible, and they provide a wealth of information and insights."

— Dr. Glen Coulthard (Yellowknives Dene)
