

Selected Poems of May Sarton: A Journey of Love, Loss, and Renewal

May Sarton (1912-1995) was an American poet, novelist, and memoirist. She is best known for her poetry, which explores the themes of love, loss, and renewal. Sarton's poems are written with a deep understanding of the human condition and offer a profound insight into the complexities of life.

Selected Poems of May Sarton is a collection of poems that spans Sarton's career. The poems are arranged chronologically, and they offer a glimpse into the evolution of Sarton's thought and writing. The early poems are full of youthful exuberance and optimism, while the later poems are more reflective and introspective. However, throughout her career, Sarton's poems are always marked by her keen observation of the natural world and her deep empathy for her fellow human beings.

One of the most striking things about Sarton's poetry is her ability to capture the beauty of the natural world. She writes about the changing seasons, the beauty of flowers, and the wonder of animals with a deep appreciation and understanding. In the poem "Winter Light," she writes:

The snow has fallen, And the world is still. The trees are bare, And the Sarton's poems are also full of love and compassion. She writes about the love between friends, lovers, and family members with a tenderness and warmth that is both moving and inspiring. In the poem "For My Father," she writes:

My father, my father, I loved you more than words can say. You were my r

Sarton's poems also explore the darker side of life. She writes about loss, grief, and despair with a raw honesty that is both heartbreaking and cathartic. In the poem "After the Funeral," she writes:

The funeral is over, And the mourners have gone home. But the pain is st

Despite the darkness that Sarton sometimes explores in her poems, she always ends on a note of hope and renewal. She believes that even in the darkest of times, there is always light to be found. In the poem "The Journey," she writes:

The journey is long, And the road is hard. But I will keep walking, Unti
